METRO ASKS AT THE MILLENNIAL LEADERSHIP SUMMIT

I think there as many opinions ... as there are millennials. For me, I think the city needs to focus on diversity in neighbourhoods, so there's something for everyone and anyone can find a home here.

CIVIC ISSUES

Older property owners ruled debate for too long: Panellist

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

They're young. They're less likely to drive. They vote in a different ward every election and they don't officially pay property taxes.

They're Toronto's millennial population and they want more say in how their city is run.

"There's a lot of young talent in Toronto, and the city needs to leverage that," said Vasiliki Bednar, associate director of the cities program at the University of Toronto's Martin Prosperity Institute. "If we just invite these people into the process, we can really leap forward."

Bednar was among the panellists at the Millennial Leadership Summit in Regent Park on Tuesday. The event focused on millennials in the workplace but touched on issues affecting their generation, including skyrocketing housing prices and precarious jobs.

> There's a lot of young talent in Toronto, and the city needs to leverage that. Vasiliki Bednar

Bednar said Toronto policymakers have privileged the voices of older property owners for too long. The result, she said, is a city that's not meeting the needs of younger residents. In particular, Bednar said, homeowners' insistence on keeping property taxes low has hampered Toronto's ability to pay for things like transit.

"We're going to have to start moving away from the image of a baby boomer driving a car when we think about voters and the people in the city who matter," she said.

She also pointed to the Uber debate and council's recent decision to prevent Car2Go vehicles from parking on side streets. The latter, she said, reserves overnight parking for homeowners as opposed to renters who may not own cars.

Because millennials are renting longer "or renting forever," Bednar wants the city to implement policies that encourage the development of secondary suites and make space for renters on residents' associations.

"With home ownership being out of reach for so many, it exposes our reliance on homeowners and really calls that model into question," she said.

TORY TALKS

Mayor John Tory acknowledged Tuesday the city hasn't done enough to consult with millennial residents and said he's looking for more ways to engage with them.

"If you're going to be about city building, then the decisions you're making are really for them," he said. "I'll be an old man by the time much of this is done."

ASIA TOUR

'There are some lessons we can take from what they've done'

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

Mayor John Tory has returned from a trip to Asia with a renewed passion for public transit.

"We rode the MTR (Mass Transit Railway) in Hong Kong and I asked the guy if he would excuse me if I got out a handkerchief and started dabbing my eyes. I was crying out of envy of what they've built," the mayor told Metro Tuesday.

Tory spent 10 days in April touring through China and Japan.

During the trip, the mayor rode the rails and discussed public transit with officials in Shanghai, Tokyo and Toronto's Chinese sister city, Chongqing.

"They've built far more transit than we have," the mayor admitted. "And there are some lessons we can take from what they've done."

Mayor John Tory rides the monorail in Chongqing, China. Between now and 2020, Toronto's Chinese sister city plans to add more than 360 kilometres of road and railway to its public transit infrastructure. COURTESY OFFICE OF THE MAYOR OF TORONTO

In particular, Tory said he was impressed at how transit operators in China and Japan leveraged the resources of the private sector.

In Tokyo, for example, many transit lines are actually privately owned.

"It really opened my mind to all kinds of private participation in our transit system," Tory said.

Tory said public-private partnerships in transit are still "a scary item" for many in Toronto, but he believes residents would embrace it if it meant getting more transit built — and built faster.

When riding the TTC, Tory still uses tokens, but he'd like the Presto card system to emulate the technologies he encountered on his trip. In Japan, the SUICA card can also be used at retail stores in subway stations, and in Shanghai, the transit card can pay taxi fare.

More than anything, Tory said riding transit in China and Japan showed him how far behind Toronto is and "reaffirmed" his feeling that the city needs to get moving on the file.

"Those cities responded to the growth they were seeing by doing something," he said.

"We responded by doing nothing for a long period of time and even when we talk about doing bold things we wring our hands and find reasons not to do it."

CHINA'S MAJOR PEOPLE-MOVING SYSTEMS

In Chongqing, China, the metro system consists of four lines and 120 stations.

The system is undergoing a massive expansion and plans to have 18 lines and over 270 stations by 2050.

Hong Kong Mass Transit Railway

Hong Kong's public transit system is one of the most efficient and profitable systems in the world.

The MTR's farebox recovery ratio is 186 per cent (the TTC's hovers around 70 per cent) and it boasts a 99.9 per cent on-time rate for train trips.

The Shanghai Metro system is second only to Beijing in terms of ridership.

An average of 10 million people use the system every weekday, and at 588 kilometres, it is the longest public transit network in the world.

Black Lives Matter goes national

ACTIVISM

Vancouver chapter opens following Toronto action

Jessica Smith Cross
Metro | Toronto

Black Lives Matter's 15-day tent city of Toronto Police headquarters has launched a new era of occupations and activism in Canada, activists say.

Canada's second official chapter of Black Lives Matter (BLM) opened in Vancouver on Sunday, with an event at the Vancouver Art Gallery featuring performances by local black artists and speeches from community activists about what it means to be black in British Columbia, said organizer Sefanit Habtemariam.

"The conception of it came out of Tent City, the occupation in Toronto," she said. "Tent City was tremendously inspiring about the way black people and people of colour can organize and resist systems that are oppressing us."

Activists in Ottawa, Montreal and Victoria also held protests in solidarity with Black Lives Matter Toronto, making what started as a local protest a national concern.

> When there's an injustice that happens against the black community ... we have a team of folks that are here to rally for you.
> Sefanit Habtemariam

Cities across Canada are different and have fewer black residents than Toronto — but that doesn't mean their voice shouldn't be heard on issues that are important at home, and across the country, said Habtemariam.

"What we're saying in Vancouver is when there's an injustice that happens against the black community — and that happens, regularly — we have a team of folks that are here to rally for you," she said.

The tent city was successful at securing some of BLM Toronto's major goals: an inquest into the death of Andrew Loku, a meeting with Premier Kathleen Wynne and the restoration of Afrofest. That success, said Habtemariam, has changed the way activists approach issues.

"Other oppressed groups seeing that is carving out possibilities of what social action and civil disobedience is capable of," said Habtemariam. "We won't stay silent and we will see a response."

For instance, she said the aboriginal activists who protested at Tent City went on to take the same kind of approach with the Occupy INAC movement — the ongoing occupations of Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada offices.

Vanessa Dorimain, an executive with the Student Federation of the University of Ottawa, organized a protest at Ottawa City Hall in support of Black Lives Matter Toronto. Tent City "lit a spark" in the city and activists are organizing to set up an Ottawa chapter.

Black Lives Matter Toronto organizer Rodney Diverlus said the group has been hoping to set up a cross-Canada network for some time, and he's encouraged to see people organizing in big and small centres.

"In Canada, we have a culture of anti-black racism that exists in major cities and in urban and rural areas across Canada," he said. "We're co-originating on resistance, coordinating our resources and supporting each other across different cities when acts of anti-black racism happen, whether it's police shootings or new policies or other ways violence manifests itself in our communities."

Ontario SIU falling behind

TRANSPARENCY

Province trails police watchdogs in other regions

Ontario — once a leader in civilian oversight after establishing Canada's first provincial police watchdog, the Special Investigations Unit, in 1990 — is now lagging behind other provinces when it comes to the transparency measures of its independent police oversight agencies.

"(These agencies) are showing the transparency and accountability that we deserve, even though they joined the race later in the game," said La Tanya Grant, whose cousin, Jermaine Carby, was shot dead by Peel Regional Police in 2014.

"That raises eyebrows for me. To know (these agencies) started after us, and for their communities to know what is going on, while in Ontario we don't, we need to find out why."

Both the SIU and the province's attorney general, Madeleine Meilleur, say all SIU director reports are confidential documents, citing privacy legislation. Ontario's privacy commissioner, however, says there are situations where information in the reports could be released if it is in the public interest.

Ontario's watchdog and the attorney general have been called upon to release the SIU director's report into the shooting death of Andrew Loku, shot dead by Toronto police in July 2015. Last month, the SIU cleared the unnamed officer who killed Loku, prompting weeks of heated protest by Black Lives Matter Toronto.

Protesters have raised questions about how the SIU investigation came to the conclusion Loku had to be shot. The sole known civilian witness to the shooting says Loku's hammer was not raised threateningly when police arrived on scene.

On Monday, Meilleur revealed that she had not yet read the SIU director's report, despite being its sole recipient. On Tuesday, she said she had been briefed on the report previously but now had read it.

Independent civilian police oversight agencies exist in most, but not all, provinces. While no civilian police agency releases the names of officers or civilians, three provincial watchdogs post either the identical or a slightly changed version of the director's report detailing a decision — their version of the document being kept secret in Ontario.

When no charges are laid, watchdogs in Nova Scotia and Manitoba publicly release the same document that is sent to their justice ministries. Investigations into Prince Edward Island police officers are also overseen by Nova Scotia's Serious Incident Response Team.

The regulations governing SIRT specifically state that "the summary to be made available to the public must be the same as the summary provided to the Minister and the agency, and must be made available to the public no later than two days after."

Family members of people killed by police in Ontario say they want the reports to be made public, believing they hold important answers.

They acknowledge that the documents could contain sensitive personal information about the person killed, but Grant, Carby's cousin, said "we can't pick and choose," saying she opts for full disclosure.

So does Joanne MacIsaac, whose brother Michael was shot dead by Durham Regional Police in 2013. She said her family requested the SIU director's report but never got a response.

"We have a right not only to know what happened, but a right to be able to review their findings and analyze them for ourselves," she said.

LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING

Councillor tables motion recommending mental health case reviews

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

Amid calls to review police processes involving people from minority groups, another layer could be added: mental health cases.

Coun. Kristyn Wong-Tam has tabled a motion to the city's disability, access and inclusion advisory committee, recommending a review of Special Investigations Unit cases involving people with mental health problems.

The move was sparked in part by reports indicating Andrew Loku — the 45-year-old victim of a police shooting, whose death has been at the centre of the Black Lives Matter movement — was dealing with a mental health illness at the time of his death.

Members of the disability communities believe police are often quick to use force "rather than de-escalating the situation" involving people in mental health crisis, said Wong-Tam.

"People's interaction with police should not result in death," she said, citing Loku and Ian Pryce among recent cases where police used lethal force instead of a de-escalation process.

The proposal will go to the executive committee before it can seek support from the entire council. The initial step would be to invite the police to come before council to explain their training modules, specifically how police officers are trained to handle situations where mental health issues are involved.

"If their training is indeed comprehensive, then why does it seem that when they're dealing with people with mental illness, that training evaporates and police are too quick to draw their guns?" she said.

"This is a systemic issue that needs to be addressed. We simply cannot ignore it."

Such a move by council, coupled with more profound inquests, would shine more light on many puzzling cases that the public should have a right to know, said Steve Lurie, executive director of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

"The bulk of police interactions with people with mental health issues do not result in shooting," he said. "But it's concerning that, despite all the training, they are still unable to de-escalate situations."

HOMICIDE

Sniper investigation national

Half a year since the murder of Clinton Yow Foo, who was found fatally shot on a driveway in Scarborough, investigators with the Toronto Police say that the homicide is a "national" investigation.

Toronto Police have set up a hashtag, #CatchTheSniper, in hopes that the public will be able to assist in the ongoing investigation.

Updating the public on Tuesday afternoon, Homicide Det. Sgt., Tam Bui, told media that Yow Foo was shot by a "high power rifle" while he was on the phone in front of his home at 6496 Kingston Rd. just before midnight on Oct. 1.

Yow Foo's body was discovered on his driveway by a "close" friend, Bui said, but they have since lost contact with him.

"This is a shot that was made at a considerable distance — at night, in the dark, it was windy, and Clinton was on the move when he was shot," Bui said. "I believe that this person has some considerable skill or some training."

According to Bui, the circumstances leading up to this case are "unusual."

"Overall the evidence that we've recovered, the planning — we believe is unique," Bui said.

When it comes to bike lanes, all eyes are on Bloor Street, where a proposed pilot project would see lanes installed from Shaw Street to Avenue Road. However, city staff is also recommending a host of new lanes across the city. Many are quite small – in one case, only 15 metres – but the city's cycling manager, Jacquelyn Hayward Gulati, says they help fill gaps in Toronto's cycling network. This map has more details.

INVESTIGATION

Police find bag of human remains

Toronto Police have found a bag holding the remains of a light-skinned adult female behind a butcher shop in the city's east end.

The bag was found Tuesday at the back of Charlie's Meat Factory, on Simpson Ave., near Broadview Ave. and Gerrard St. E. An employee saw what was in the bag and called 911 at about 11:20 a.m.

"We have a presumptive idea that we do, in fact, believe it's a female, light skinned," homicide Det-Sgt. Terry Browne told reporters at the scene. Testing has yet to confirm whether the body is human, but Browne said he is fairly confident it is. The condition of the part suggests that the victim died relatively recently, he said.

Employees at Charlie's Meat Factory told police that they didn't see the bag when they arrived at work. This doesn't mean that it wasn't there earlier, Browne said, but he doesn't believe it was planted by a suspect on Monday night.

"As soon as they saw what they saw, being in the meat business, it certainly appeared to them to be human in nature," Browne said of the employee who called police.

He wouldn't elaborate on the exact body part found, but his description of the victim suggests it's part of a torso or abdomen.

He said officers will continue to search the area.

"The fact that we only have a portion suggests the remaining parts could possibly be in the vicinity," he said.

While homicide detectives were called, there's no conclusive proof yet that a murder been committed.

Families seek $15.4M in sperm bank suit

MALPRACTICE

Xytex workers allegedly lied to clients, falsified donor records

A woman who now serves as vice-president of sperm bank Xytex Corp. encouraged a donor to lie about his IQ and then sold it to a California couple, describing him as "ultra intelligent," alleges a new lawsuit against the U.S. company.

Filed Monday in a San Francisco court, the complaint for damages from the couple also alleges Xytex officials claimed ignorance about donor Chris Aggeles' mental illness, even nine months after it was widely reported in the media.

This lawsuit is the fourth to be filed against the sperm bank in a week. The other three were filed by Ontario families last Wednesday. All claim Xytex misinformed would-be parents about the donor.

There are more lawsuits to come, said San Francisco lawyer Nancy Hersh, noting the donor's sperm has been used to create at least 36 children.

Xytex lawyer Ted Lavender said he expects the cases will be dismissed, like the one filed a year ago in a court in Georgia, where Xytex is based.

"Pursuing claims in a court of law requires actual evidence and proof. Making unfounded allegations in the court of public opinion requires no actual proof at all, but merely the word of the very lawyers and litigants who already failed in a court of law," Lavender said.

Aggeles' donor profile on Xytex's website showed him to have an IQ of 160, the same as Einstein's. It said he was healthy and without mental illness, had bachelor's and master's degrees, and was working on a PhD in neuroscience engineering.

A recent Toronto Star investigation confirmed through court documents that Aggeles has had diagnoses of schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and narcissistic personality disorder, and that he has acknowledged having schizoaffective disorder.

He did eight months in jail for burglary and has a history of previous arrests.

The latest lawsuit charges that Xytex "refused to concede" the truth about Aggeles and continued to sell his sperm after his arrest history and mental health came to light.

"The Xytex Corporation has recklessly pursued its commercial motives without any consideration for the safety of the plaintiffs or their children," it alleges.

Acts may constitute battery

Lawsuits against a U.S. sperm bank and its local distributor are heading into uncharted Canadian legal territory by alleging that the defendants committed "battery" by misrepresenting a donor, experts say.

Unusual as it seems, the battery allegation may have some basis, according to medical malpractice lawyers who aren't involved in the case.

"It's fair to say it would be a novel case in Canada, but it would stand a reasonable likelihood of success given the facts that have been disclosed so far," said Toronto medical malpractice lawyer Paul Harte.

The families are suing for a total of $15.4 million in damages and allege fraud, negligent misrepresentation, "wrongful pregnancy" and other charges.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

General Motors to roll out car share plan

Jessica Smith Cross
Metro | Toronto

General Motors is planning to bring some kind of car sharing to Toronto — the company just isn't saying exactly what that will be, yet.

GM announced this week it will open a GM Mobility Campus on Eastern Avenue in the coming years, that will include a dealership and a research and development hub. But, according to GM vice-president David Paterson, before that opens, GM will be bringing a form of transportation innovation to Toronto.

GM operates car sharing in the U.S. and is currently investigating different models, with different pilot projects, involving fleets of shared vehicles and smartphone technology, said Paterson.

"We see the future of the automobile industry as electric, connected, autonomous vehicles and shared," said Paterson. "Toronto is a great place for all of these areas, for a variety of reasons. One of which is congestion."

One way to ease congestion in the near future is use of shared autonomous cars that spend much less time parked than traditional vehicles, he said.

Paterson said he's been working with governments to bring in more charging stations to condominiums and workplaces that work for GM's electric vehicles the Volt and the forthcoming Bolt.

GM runs Maven+, which has partnered with a private real estate company in New York called Stonehenge, to keep shared cars in condo parking lots and let members pay for a membership through their condo fees.

That's a model that could work well in Toronto, said Paterson

Toronto has a lot of potential for electric cars, car sharing and eventually, self-driving vehicles, but GM doesn't have a project to announce just yet, though the city can expect that before the Mobility Campus opens in a few years, Paterson said.

"All of this change, and move to a shared economy in the auto sector is happening very quickly."

What sensitivity means

Counsellors say politician could learn his lessons well

Sara Ericsson
For Metro | Ottawa

As Ottawa MPP Jack MacLaren heads into sensitivity training following explicit remarks he made about Liberal MP Karen McCrimmon surfaced online, experts say he may benefit from lessons learned in their tutorials.

Premier Kathleen Wynne is proposing a "code of conduct" for all MPPs and has called for Tory Leader Patrick Brown to remove MacLaren from caucus, saying the joke is "the kind of language and behaviour that fuels misogyny."

Diane Mason, president and owner of HR Proactive, which teaches sensitivity courses throughout Canada, says sensitivity training can stop the problem in its tracks but is often only requested after a harassment complaint has been made.

Progressive Conservative MPP Jack MacLaren tried to avoid the media for an hour after question period ended. ROB FERGUSON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The organization's One-to-One program offers individualized half-day sessions that include classwork, informational videos and discussion. Mason says the four most common training subjects are sexual harassment, bullying and violence, leadership communication and coaching as well as race and culture.

Over 50 per cent of HR Proactive cases focus on sexual harassment, and 75 per cent of clients are male, said Mason.

Mason says her clients "often don't realize they've crossed a line" when the harassment occurs. Her organization's approach is not to change these employees but rather to "help give them tools to help combat these issues in the workplace."

Breakview Training also offers sensitivity training workshops across Canada. Owner Charles Gordon believes many of his workshop attendees are fully aware of their boundaries and when they cross them.

Approximately 80 to 90 per cent of the Breakview Training's clients are those in leadership positions at their respective companies. The most predominant area his clients require training in is bullying — an issue he says is often overlooked in leadership roles where employees often aren't held accountable.

"If someone is a good performer, the company will tend to dance around the issue until it's reaching litigation," he said.

Workshops are structured around an interactive coursework model using a "meta-cognitive" approach, which gets attendees "thinking about how they think."

Both Mason and Gordon say it's better when training is preemptive and occurs before there are problems or issues occurring.

In Gordon's eyes, "It's better to help employees understand what their responsibilities are before they cross that line."

City tops 1910 heat record

Brodie Thomas
Metro | Calgary

A 106-year-old Calgary weather record was toppled on Tuesday afternoon as Calgarians fired up their air conditioners and barbecues over an early dose of summer temperatures.

Environment Canada recorded the high Tuesday at 26.9 C around 5 p.m.

That topped the previous record set in 1910 by 0.2 degrees.

By 10 a.m. it was over 20 C in parts of Calgary — the normal high for this time of year is 13 degrees.

Residents flocked outside early in the day to get some sunshine before it got — dare we say it — too hot.

Just to put things in perspective, it is still April in Canada.

It could just as easily been -20 C as it was in 1927, or there could still be 20 centimetres of snow on the ground right now, as there was in 1955.

MENTAL HEALTH

Scope of issue only beginning to be realized, Trudeau warns

> I wouldn't be my mother's son if I wasn't a strong advocate for mental-health. Justin Trudeau

Canada has yet to feel the full effects of mental-health issues gripping people across the country, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said Tuesday as he pledged support to lower levels of government in combating the problem.

"Whether we're talking about its impact on young people, its impact on workplaces around the country, whether its impact on servicemen and women, we are only beginning to realize the scale, the scope of the problem," Trudeau said as he met members of the Canadian Teachers Federation.

The prime minister said his government would work with the provinces and territories to build the ranks of the counsellors, psychiatrists and psychologists who work with people facing mental-health struggles.

"I wouldn't be my mother's son if I wasn't a strong advocate for mental-health and de-stigmatization of mental health," Trudeau said as he marked his six-month anniversary since being elected to power.

His mother, Margaret, underwent decades of treatment for bipolar disorder, recounting her personal struggles in her book, Changing My Mind.

The prime minister acknowledged there is no easy solution to mental-health problems, particularly in indigenous communities.

But he suggested the recent spate of suicides and attempted suicides by First Nations young people is linked to what he described as generational neglect of indigenous issues by successive past governments.

"We know the challenges are massive," Trudeau said about correcting the disconnect between federal governments and First Nations. But there are solutions out there, he said.

"In indigenous communities where there has been the support and an ability to do language and cultural teaching to an extremely high level, suicide rates have plummeted," said Trudeau.

Pregnant women positive for Zika

Thandi Fletcher
Metro | Vancouver

British Columbia health officials say two pregnant women are among seven people in the province who recently tested positive for the Zika virus, which has been linked to birth defects.

Dr. Bonnie Henry, deputy provincial health officer, could not comment on the condition of the pregnant women for privacy reasons, except to say they are being closely monitored.

"We're watching them carefully," Henry told Metro. "It's quite distressing, of course, because we just don't have all the answers yet about the Zika virus and about what might happen."

> There is a lot of fear for those who are aware of the risks. Dr. Julie van Schalkwyk

Last week, U.S. health officials confirmed there is no longer any doubt the Zika virus, which is transmitted by the Aedes mosquito, causes microcephaly, a condition in which a baby's head is far smaller than normal, along with other severe brain defects.

Since testing for Zika started last November in B.C., 635 people have been tested for the virus, according to the B.C. Centre for Disease Control. The seven lab-confirmed positive cases involve people who recently travelled to Zika-infected countries, including El Salvador, Colombia, Haiti and St. Lucia. The virus isn't carried by mosquitoes in B.C., said Henry.

Dr. Julie van Schalkwyk, head of obstetrics and gynecology at B.C. Women's Hospital who is a specialist for pregnant women with infectious diseases, also could not comment on the two pregnant women, except to say neither has shown any signs of complications due to the virus.

She said the situation is frustrating for physicians, who are unable to provide patients with much information about the virus as the long-term effects are not fully understood.

"It's very, very difficult," she said. "There is a lot of fear for those who are aware of the risks, and I think the fear is worsened with an inability of care providers to provide a rapid and accurate diagnosis and prognosis."

Homolka sightings stir town

Reports that convicted killer Karla Homolka has resurfaced southwest of Montreal are creating a buzz in the town of Chateauguay.

Homolka is living in the community and some of her three children are attending a local school, City News and Global both said Tuesday.

Neither the school board nor local police confirmed the reports, citing privacy laws, although the principal at Centennial Park Elementary School sent home a letter reassuring parents their children are safe.

In the early 1990s, Homolka and her then-husband, Paul Bernardo, were convicted of crimes related to the rape and murder of two schoolgirls. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coverup of mass abuse of 'vagrants'

SOUTH KOREA

Kids, disabled and homeless forcibly detained in '70s and '80s

Three decades ago, a policeman tortured Choi Seung-woo over a piece of bread he found in the boy's schoolbag.

After being stripped and having a cigarette lighter repeatedly sparked near his genitals, the 14-year-old falsely confessed to stealing the bread. Two men with clubs came and dragged him off to the Brothers Home, a mountainside institution where some of the worst human-rights atrocities in modern South Korean history took place.

Even now, Choi weeps as he speaks of what happened there.

A guard in Choi's dormitory raped him that night in 1982, and the next, and the next. So began five hellish years of slave labour and near-daily assaults.

Choi was one of thousands — the homeless, the drunk, the unlucky, but mostly children and the disabled — who were forced into facilities for so-called vagrants in the 1970s and '80s. The roundup came as the ruling dictators prepared to bid for and host the 1988 Seoul Olympics, which they saw as international validation of South Korea's arrival as a modern country. So they ordered police and local officials to "purify" the streets.

Today, nobody has been held accountable for the hundreds of deaths, rapes and beatings on the grounds of Brothers, the largest of dozens of facilities for those considered undesirable, according to an Associated Press investigation. The AP found that abuse at Brothers, previously almost unknown, was much more vicious and widespread than had been realized.

Secrecy around Brothers persists because of a coverup at the highest levels. Two early attempts to investigate were suppressed by senior officials who went on to thrive in high-profile jobs; one remains a senior adviser to the current ruling party. The few former inmates speaking out want a new investigation. The government is blocking an opposition lawmaker's push to revisit the case, contending that the evidence is too old.

The official silence means that even as South Korea prepares for its second Olympics, in 2018, thousands of traumatized former inmates have still received no compensation, let alone public recognition or an apology.

Police officers, assisted by shop owners, rounded up children, panhandlers, small-time street merchants, the disabled and dissidents. They ended up as prisoners at 36 nationwide facilities and numbered 16,000 by 1986, according to government documents. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LABOUR

Nearly 4,000 people were at Brothers Home. Once an orphanage, Brothers at its peak had more than 20 factories behind its well-guarded walls in the southern port city of Busan, churning out goods made by inmates.

U.S. ELECTION

Trump, Clinton win in N.Y.

Front-runners Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton swept to victory with ease in Tuesday's New York primary, with Trump bouncing back from a difficult stretch in the Republican contest and Clinton pushing closer to locking up the Democratic nomination.

Trump's victory was a psychological boost for his campaign, though the impact on his path to the Republican nomination was still to be determined by the number of delegates he secured. If he captured more than 50 per cent of the vote, he would be in strong position to win most of New York's 95 delegates, an impressive haul.

Trump leads the Republican race with 756 delegates, ahead of Sen. Ted Cruz with 559 and Ohio Gov. John Kasich with 144. Securing the Republican nomination requires 1,237.

Among Democrats, Clinton has 1,758 delegates to Sen. Bernie Sanders' 1,076. Those totals include both pledged delegates from primaries and caucuses and superdelegates, the party insiders who can back the candidate of their choice regardless of how their state votes. It takes 2,383 to win the Democratic nomination.

With the votes still being counted, Trump declared that it was "impossible" for his rivals to catch him.

Revealed: The generous gifting habits of Canadians

Canadians spend an average of $166 a month on gifts, excluding Christmas and other holidays, according to the results of a survey conducted by a popular online shopping site.

"I was surprised by how much Canadians are spending," said Sari Friedman, director of marketing for Ebates.ca. "Once you start adding that up, you're talking about a big chunk of change for the year."

In all, 82 per cent of survey respondents reported buying an average of two gifts a month.

After Christmas, spending on gifts by Canadians begins ramping up again about three weeks before Mother's Day, said Friedman. The increased spending continues throughout the summer in part because more people are married in the summer, creating a greater number of gifting occasions, including wedding showers and anniversaries.

To stay on track financially, Friedman recommends making a list of upcoming gift occasions and budgeting and shopping in advance where possible, to take advantage of sales.

She also recommends interacting with brands on social media, like Facebook, to keep track of special offers.

"It's really about shopping smart for gifts, and really being prepared," said Friedman.

More than a third of survey respondents — 36 per cent — said they give better gifts than they get. Re-gifting is common, with 20 per cent admitting to re-gifting birthday gifts and 14 per cent re-gifting hostess gifts.

Re-gifting is lowest when it comes to Father's Day and Mother's Day gifts.

Respondents said they prefer cash over other gifts at a wedding, and said they tend to spend the most on birthday and anniversary gifts for their partner, Friedman said.

"They're also cited as being the hardest gifts to shop for. I think that's because there is so much emotion behind it. You care about getting them a really great gift that they are going to love. Sometimes it takes longer to find the perfect thing," said Friedman.

MORE SURVEY FINDINGS

1. Average spending on birthday and anniversary gifts: $101 per gift
2. Wedding gifts: $146 per person, with 36 per cent of respondents preferring to receive cash and 32 per cent citing store-bought gifts as their preference. Ten per cent would prefer gift certificates and 18 per cent had no preference.
3. Respondents expect to spend $63 on each parent on Mother's Day and Father's Day this year.
4. Men spend 30 per cent more on gifts for Mother's Day than women. Men spend an average of $71, while women spend an average of $54 on their moms.
5. Women (86 per cent) are likely to be more generous with the number of gifts they buy, while men spend more across all categories by about 25 per cent.

DAIRY

Pea-based milk takes on market

Irene Kuan
Metro | Toronto

Plant and nut-based milk is nothing new, as consumers, both lactose intolerant and not, are increasingly finding non-dairy alternatives for that morning bowl of cereal including almond, cashew and coconut milks.

Now, another non-dairy product is about to make a splash in the milk market. The pea-based milk by California-based Ripple Foods, created by Adam Lowry, the cofounder of Method Soap, is claiming to be the next big thing in dairy alternatives and will even solve the issue of unsustainability and the carbon footprint created by producing cow and almond milks.

The vegan, organic and gluten-free milk is produced using yellow pea protein and contains sunflower oil, cane sugar, algal oil and a host of vitamins and minerals. The company boasts its plant-based milk contains more calcium, potassium and protein than cow's milk, as well as less sugar.

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD ON BLACK LIVES MATTER

HIDDEN IN PLAIN SIGHT

Canadian chapters of Black Lives Matter have, through recent protest actions, achieved substantive victories, but have so far failed to attract the kind of broad mainstream media attention given to the U.S. movement, in cities like Ferguson and Baltimore. Are we unwilling to face homegrown racism?

In late March, before spring had sprung, Black Lives Matter protesters camped for two weeks in icy, wet weather outside Toronto Police Headquarters.

Not that you likely heard much about it. If you live outside Toronto, you probably had no clue. Torontonians might have heard some details, but coverage wasn't exactly overwhelming. It certainly wasn't national news.

Which is odd. Dozens of black-rights protesters occupied 24/7 the entrance to the largest municipal police force in this country — in sub-zero weather. They held speeches and cookouts and pressed forward a manifesto and demands. They were spurred by the police shooting of a black man, Andrew Loku, who was unarmed save for a hammer and whose death was investigated in relative secrecy.

It sounds a lot like the ingredients of a Black Lives Matters protest in the U.S., and maybe if it was, you might have heard about it.

Especially, you would think, after Toronto protesters got results: There will be a coroner's inquest into Loku's death; Toronto City Hall has unanimously supported a provincial review of the Special Investigations Unit, which investigates police misconduct; Premier Kathleen Wynne and her cabinet have agreed to work with protestors to "implement meaningful change."

But I asked friends across the country, and almost none — not even those who work in media — knew about the movement. In the age of Black Lives Matter in the U.S., arguably one of the defining voices of our time, the big question is: why?

Canadians appear to care more about anti-black racism in the U.S. — and take it more seriously — than in our own country.

Maybe the Toronto-headquartered national media were simply afraid of Toronto-centrism (we always are). But I also think Canadians appear to care more about anti-black racism in the U.S. — and take it more seriously — than in our own country.

It's a phenomenon Anthony Morgan, a civil rights lawyer in Toronto, has dubbed "Canadian racial exceptionalism." In a column written last summer, he described how we consider ourselves both too polite and nice to be racist, and too polite and nice to talk about it. That means, when someone protests anti-black racism, the common reaction is confusion, or irritation, or perhaps a shrug.

"We in Canada grow comfortable by scapegoating the United States and their narrative, and saying, 'Well, at least it's not as bad," Morgan told me. Having avoided the depth and scope of American Jim Crow, we imagine ourselves innocent.

Canadians consider this a post-racial country, agreed Rodney Diverlus, a co-founder of Black Lives Matter TO. "What that means is we've missed out on the opportunity to have national conversations about anti-black racism while it's still happening here," he said.

Of course, some people outside Toronto did hear about the protest, and they set up solidarity movements in Ottawa, Montreal and Vancouver. One of the seven young women organizers in Vancouver, Holly Bishu, said that if you want to know about racism in this country, just ask someone of colour; you'll hear that "it's not post-racial at all."

"I've experienced so many things growing up here that I didn't even realize were so harmful until I got old enough to be like, 'Oh my goodness, let me examine these,' and it was a lot of anti-blackness," she said.

Some specifics, should you need them: Black Canadians were the fastest growing population of federal inmates in a 2016 report, despite being only about three per cent of the population. They're three times more likely to be carded by police than whites in Toronto and are overrepresented among kids in care. Last month, the United Nations criticized Canada's record on child welfare, health, education and unemployment when it comes to its black citizens.

Meanwhile, a Forum Research poll of Torontonians, released last week, found only half of Torontonians agreed there is systemic racism in the city.

It took about a week for Toronto's mainstream media coverage of the protest to really pick up. Reporters were keen to cover a police clash with protesters, a contentious tweet from an organizer, and the movement's protest outside the house of Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne. Diverlus, who was tasked with media relations, said interest was largely confined to stories about tension between the protest and other groups, with the systemic-racism angle getting short shrift. Some stories, for example, didn't mention Andrew Loku's name at all.

For someone writing about this, right now, you'd think I would have known better. You'd think I would have at least gone to the protest. Or written about it sooner. I did not.

I'm not an example of what should be done, but I am a curious participant. I finally sensed, by the end of the second week of the protest, that I had missed something fairly big, and fairly obvious. Morgan calls this the need for reconciliation, between the Canada we think we are, and the Canada we really are. Which is to say: One that needs to wake up.

BOOK EXCERPT THE VEGETABLE BUTCHER

A light and in-season snack

PREP

To boil fiddleheads

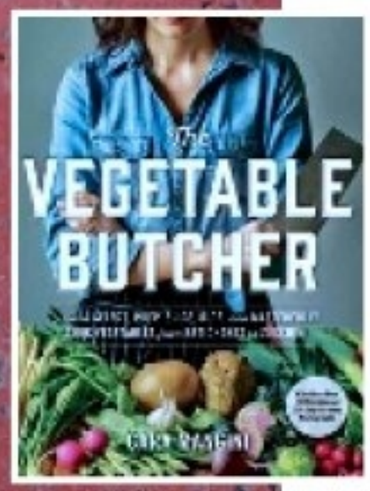
This is a necessary step to eliminate any bitterness in the ferns. Once they are boiled, you can use them as is or toss them into a saute, risotto, or pasta (add at the last minute). Drop the fiddleheads in a large pot of salted boiling water and cook until they are bright green and just tender, 3 to 5 minutes depending on size and thickness. Lift them with a spider and transfer them to an ice-water bath to cool. Drain them well and transfer them to a dish towel to dry.



RECIPE

Celebrate spring's arrival with fiddleheads

To Clean and Prep Fiddleheads:

1. Immerse fiddlehead ferns in a bowl of cool water and use your fingers to rub off the brown papery scales that cover the coils.

2. Gently unfurl the fern, if needed, to remove any scales stuck between the coils. Rinse the ferns under cold water in a colander and drain them.

3. Immerse the fiddleheads again in a bowl of cool water if needed, agitating them to release any remaining film. Rinse them again and drain.

4. Wrap the ferns in a clean, dry dish towel.

5. Gently shake the bundle back and forth to remove any remaining scales.

6. Trim the woody stem ends of the fiddleheads with a paring knife

Orange-Shallot Fiddlehead Ferns and Ricotta Crostini

Makes 14 to 16 crostini

Whisk together 3 tablespoons freshly squeezed orange juice, ½ teaspoon freshly grated orange zest, 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar or champagne vinegar, 2 teaspoons pure maple syrup, 2 teaspoons minced shallots, ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper in a medium-size bowl. Slowly stream in 4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, whisking to combine. Add 1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh chives and ½ pound fiddlehead ferns, cleaned, trimmed, boiled until just tender, shocked in an ice bath, and drained, and toss to coat.

Divide ¾ cup whole-milk ricotta cheese among 14 to 16 small crostini, spreading it on each. Lift 2 to 3 of the fiddlehead ferns from the bowl with a slotted spoon and place on top of each crostini. Lightly drizzle with some of the vinaigrette and top with a pinch of chopped chives.

Fast food tends to be far from nutritious and should only be eaten occasionally, especially for kids. If you're in a pinch and the kids are craving McD's, there are healthier options. They can have a hamburger, but skip the fries and pop; pick milk and apple slices instead, saving on fat, calories and added sugar. A wrap may seem like a healthier choice, but the tortilla, fried chicken, ranch dressing and cheese adds extra calories, fat and sodium.

JOHANNA SCHNELLER WHAT I'M WATCHING

Female agent brings humanity to drama

THE SHOW: The Night Manager, Season 1, Episode 4 (AMC)
THE MOMENT: The sports day speech

Olivia Colman plays Angela Burr on The Night Manager. AMC

British intelligence agent Angela Burr (the magnificent Olivia Colman) and her younger colleague Grace (Simona Brown) are working late, tracking Richard Roper (Hugh Laurie), an arms trafficker.

"Shouldn't you go home?" Grace asks.

"My husband knows why I do this," Angela replies. "He knows about the school sports day."

Calmly, simply, Angela tells Grace the story: In Baghdad in 2003, two shells fell on a school playing field. One was mustard gas, which burnt the hands and faces of the children. (Here Angela begins to cry, but she carries on.) The other was sarin gas, which destroyed their lungs. Roper, who was there, began selling sarin after that.

"Roper saw what I saw, and he thought, Business," Angela concludes. "So Mr. Burr knows I have to be here."

Whoa. This miniseries, based on John LeCarre's novel, spends the bulk of its time with posh, blue-eyed men — Roper; his faithful henchman Corky (Tom Hollander); and his nemesis Jonathan, a newly recruited spy (Tom Hiddleston). They're forever jetting from Mallorca to Egypt, eyeballing one another cooly, and saying things like, "I think one is becoming a tad deranged." It's intelligent, amoral and unsettling.

So the counterweight Angela provides is crucial. In the novel, her character was a man. To switch it to a woman, and to cast Colman, was genius. She's every bit as intelligent and fierce as her foes, but we need her heart to remind us that Roper's mansions and islands come at an unfathomable cost.

Johanna Schneller is a media connoisseur who zeroes in on pop-culture moments. She appears Monday through Thursday.

Old World wines get a makeover

When I first saw Star Wars: The Force Awakens in the theatre I couldn't help but think of how it mirrored today's wine industry. The Force Awakens is really just the original movie's story with a youthful twist. What does that have to do with wine? Well, plenty of European wines are working from the same script. Take Spain for example. Though you can't get much more old-school, many winemakers have discovered that giving their juice a millennial makeover can attract a younger audience while also keeping their mature fans happy. Red Guitar's 2013 Old Vine Tempranillo Garnacha ($12.49-$16.99), from the region of Navarra, wraps its blend of two classic Spanish grapes in a hip, Picasso-esque package. Smooth, bright and balanced, it's a great partner for grilled meats and poultry.

LIFE STORIES

Going the distance in the fight against cancer

What is Relay For Life? It's a community-based event in which teams raise money for the Canadian Cancer Society by taking turns walking a track. But it's also a celebration, honouring the experiences of people whose lives have been touched by cancer.

In 2015 alone, 196,900 Canadians were diagnosed with cancer — one every three minutes. Alison Williams, from Newmarket, Ontario, received her diagnosis in 1997, the same year she lost her sister Suzy to the disease.

Williams and her father, also a cancer survivor, first became involved with the Canadian Cancer Society 17 years ago when they began a bonspiel fundraiser, Curl for Cancer, in Suzy's memory. It was through Alison's work with the Society that she first heard about Relay For Life. "I wanted to give back to the community, so I got a team of 10 people together," Williams says. "Once the event was over, I was hooked."

Williams is a teacher, but her involvement with Relay has taught her many things. In fact, she equates Relay For Life with her own journey: Things seemed darkest after her diagnosis as she faced the uncertainties of treatment and recovery. But she kept moving forward, toward the start of a new day.

Walking the track while hundreds of people — pulled from different communities of family, friends, co-workers and neighbours — come together to cheer on cancer survivors is deeply inspiring, she says. Every Relay For Life across Canada begins with a Survivors' Lap, a ceremony where cancer survivors are invited to circle the track together to celebrate their victories, both big and small, against the disease. For Williams, the Survivors' Lap is especially emotional because it illustrates the direct impact of Relay For Life and the funds it raises. "We're getting more and more people out to the event each year," she says of the event in Newmarket. "The first year there were 30 or 40 people in the Survivors' Lap. Now there are around 200. That shows that more people are surviving."

The Luminary Ceremony is another important aspect of Relay For Life. Luminaries are special paper bags with candles placed in them and inscribed with the names of cancer survivors and those who have died from the disease. At twilight, loved ones light the candles to illuminate the track and inspire participants. The event is also a celebration, and participants are invited to take part in trackside activities and have some fun.

It's easy to get involved. In 2016, more than 300 communities across Canada will host Relay For Life events. In the 17 years that the Canadian Cancer Society has been hosting these events, it has raised more than $496 million. Over the years, these funds have been invested to fight more than 200 types of cancer through research and other vital work. They have also funded support programs for patients. Today more than 60 per cent of people diagnosed with cancer will survive, compared with 25 per cent in the 1940s, when the charity began funding research. Participating in Relay For Life is simple. And its effects can last a lifetime.

Paying it forward

The baton is a powerful symbol of the Canadian Cancer Society's Relay For Life. The event is team-based, and accepting the baton from a teammate symbolizes the continuing fight against cancer. In passing the Relay baton, participants are passing energy, emotion and symbolizing that they are all in the fight together.

To help spread awareness of Relay For Life, members of the news media — newspapers, blogs and radio stations — across Canada are collaborating with the Canadian Cancer Society to participate in a virtual baton-passing relay called #MediaRelayForLife.

"Each one of us has a different story," says cancer survivor Alison Williams of Newmarket, Ontario. And bringing these stories together is empowering for all people whose lives have been touched by the disease. Now in its second year, the #MediaRelayForLife campaign builds awareness by interviewing Relay For Life participants, from caregivers to survivors. From April 18 until May 31, press outlets from across the country will tell the stories of these champions. Look for these stories throughout the campaign and share them through social media using the hashtag #MediaRelayForLife.

Half coupe, half hatchback, all fun

REVIEW

Unique details add up to one distinctive ride

Mike Goetz
For Metro Canada

The Hyundai Veloster debuted back in 2011. So five years of me looking and pondering its unique exterior style and shape, which marries sport coupe and hatchback themes, and I still can't decide whether I like it or not. Some days it seems fresh and menacing. Other days it seems too thick and chunky, especially in profile.

But for 2016, Hyundai sought fit to introduce a new Rally Edition, featuring a stunning blue matte paint job, trick wheels, (faux) carbon fibre detailing around the grille, and a slightly lower stance (with commensurate suspension tuning), and it tipped the scales for me. I am now fully 51 per cent in favour of Veloster's distinctive appearance.

It seems like the Rally Edition was created to give people another way to access the two main drawing cards of the Veloster's charismatic turbo model — the 201-horsepower turbo motor and the aggressive grounds-effect package looks. Both pieces dramatically alter the Veloster's personality for the better. A Veloster without them, like the base model, is a Veloster with less purpose in life.

Rally Edition and Turbo are actually equally priced at $27,199. Turbo gives you navigation and a panoramic sunroof. Rally Edition has neither, but makes up for it with all the Rally Edition visual and suspension tweaks, and a specific Rally Edition interior. That interior is edgy and full of contrasts, with some metal-like surfaces and seat inserts rendered in the same shade as the exterior. Very cool and inviting.

All Rally Edition models, like our tester, are fitted with a six-speed manual transmission hooked up to a "B&M Racing Sport Shifter." As advertised, shift throws are short, but also direct and with good mechanical heft.

The steering also has the necessary heft and feel to make cornering a satisfying experience. The tire and suspension tweaks have definitely upgraded the handling. But those aggressive 18-inch wheels and tires make this Veloster a bit stiff for everyday driving. And while 201 horsepower is an awfully good number for a 1.6-litre turbo, and you will enjoy its thump, it doesn't make the vehicle jump, as say something like the 197-horsepower Ford Fiesta ST. The Hyundai doesn't handle as well as the Ford either. But that's not to say it isn't fun.

Like all Velosters, Rally Edition features a third door on the passenger side, so your rear seat passengers can get in without yoga — and it's surprisingly roomy back there for a small coupe. Overall, the Veloster Rally Edition is distinctive and fun, with many fine details, to keep you engaged and contented on city commutes, and on romps you take for the sheer joy of it.

THE CHECKLIST | 2016 HYUNDAI VELOSTER

THE BASICS

- Type. Three-door, four-passenger, FWD, compact sports coupe/hatchback
- Power. 138-hp 1.6-litre I4, 201-hp 1.6-litre turbo I4
- Transmission. Six-speed manual, Six-speed automatic, Seven-speed automatic

POINTS

- "Third door" is a small one, and on the passenger side.
- Base "non turbo" engine not very sporty.
- New limited-edition Rally Edition for 2016 only available in a special Matte Blue paint.

MARKET POSITION

- Satisfying sporty coupe for those that don't need the full-on extreme sports experience.
- Targeted at a younger crowd, but mature crowd seems to like them too.

CX-9 ideal crossover

USED VEHICLE

Check water pump on 2007-2015 models

The first-generation CX-9 is the largest vehicle in Mazda's lineup.

This large crossover SUV was designed for busy families, and hit hardest with its luxurious cabin, spaciousness, and responsive driving characteristics.

Owners say that common areas for rust include the front edge of the hood, the lower, inner edge of the tailgate, and the lower, inner edges of the doors.

Some owners have reported issues with the CX-9's All Wheel Drive (AWD) system, typically at low mileage and under warranty.

Though this issue doesn't seem widespread, CX-9 shoppers set on an AWD model are advised to have a Mazda mechanic check all system electronics, to inspect the Power Takeoff Unit (PTU) assembly and rear differential for signs of fluid leakage, and to confirm that no AWD warning lights are lit up in the instrument cluster.

Run the engine at idle with the hood open, and listen for a ticking sound from deep below.

This sound could be the result of a bad belt pulley that's worn out.

According to the owner's community, changing a water pump in a CX-9 involves engine removal, and will be pricey.

As such, shoppers are strongly advised to have a mechanic check for signs of water-pump wear, with an inspection for coolant leaking from the assembly, and coolant levels. Be absolutely sure the water pump on the model you're considering is in top shape.

JUSTIN PRITCHARD

Features

It offers three seating rows, a generous cargo hold, and upscale feature content including HID lighting, a sunroof, BOSE audio, automatic climate control, push-button start, wood trim, heated leather, a motorized tailgate and plenty more.

Engines

A 3.5 or 3.7 litre V6 was standard, with up to 273 horsepower. The smaller, 3.5 litre V6, with 263 horsepower was replaced by the larger 3.7 litre unit from 2008. All models got a six-speed automatic, and most used copies will feature Mazda's Active Torque Split All Wheel Drive (AWD) system.

What owners like

The CX-9's upscale cabin, commanding driving position, roominess and flexibility, and confidence in challenging driving conditions. The BOSE stereo and xenon lights are among the favorite features, and styling is highly rated, too.

What owners dislike

Common complaints include heavy fuel use, a navigation screen that's hard to read in direct sunlight, and some low-budget interior trimmings.

CRUISE M

BMW releases a limited edition bicycle

BMW has unveiled a new limited edition bicycle, the Cruise M, inspired by its latest premium sportscar and a bicycle that could become just as collectible.

The all-new M2 is a phenomenal everyday sports car and one that is expected to keep BMW's production lines very, very busy over the coming months, such is the anticipated demand.

However, for those that can't wait for the M2 to start shipping to their country or don't have the financial flexibility to cover the car's $53,000 U.S. premium price tag (before options) the company on Monday wheeled out a bicycle inspired by its latest 'M' car and one that promises to be just as exclusive, yet at a fraction of the price.

The BMW Cruise M Limited Edition bike comes in the same Long Beach metallic blue finish as its four-wheeled brethren. It also uses carbon fibre and aluminum in its construction for strength without adding weight. It even has hydraulic disc brakes, front and rear. But, unlike the M2, this bike will be limited to just 1,500 examples globally and each will cost about $1,500 US

The BMW Cruise M Limited Edition bike is being released alongside, and is inspired by, the M2 sportscar. BMW GROUP

It might read like a simple marketing stunt, but while BMW might be better known for motorized transport — it has been building cars for 100 years and motorbikes for 93 years — 2016 will also mark the 60th anniversary of its bicycle business.

So the bike sits on lightweight 28-inch wheels and has a 30-gear system.

The frame has been shaped so that the crossbar follows the contour of a motorbike's fuel tank and each section of the aluminum frame has been welded in a way that the finished result looks like the bike has been pressed or moulded out of a single sheet of metal.

Every bike built will also arrive with a plaque detailing its limited edition status and which of the 1,500 examples it is.

Alongside the Cruise M Limited Edition, on Monday BMW also announced its full Spring 2016 bicycle collection. AFP

DRIVE BRIEFS

Volkswagen will offer a sneak peek of its next flagship SUV in Beijing

VW has high hopes for its latest concept car, which will provide the foundation for next year's Touareg SUV, a vehicle the company is positioning as a serious challenger to the Volvo XC90 or Range Rover in terms of luxury, performance and style.

Volkswagen has been using each of this year's major auto shows to give the public a conceptual taste of its plans for an extended SUV range. It's already unveiled a compact and a sub-compact model, and at the Beijing show, which opens its doors to the press on April 25, it will complete the set with a full-size luxury off-roader. Though officially a concept, the show car will be a clear indicator of what to expect from the next-generation Touareg due in 2017, the company's overall flagship and one that VW wants to look right at home when parked between a BMW X6 and a Range Rover. # BMW i3 hatchback: Calm amid chaos

I3

Best seller represents 'revolution'

The most energy efficient car sold in the United States for the third consecutive year represents "something of a revolution" for the whole auto industry. The 2016 BMW i3 hatchback has advanced technology in spades, a body structure made of carbon-fibre-reinforced plastic and a fully electric powertrain that can be ordered with an optional two-cylinder range-extending gasoline engine, reports auto info website, The Car Connection. Meant to provide quiet, all-electric transport for those living in congested urban centres, the BMW i3 "is absolutely the most calming, soothing vehicle we've driven in truly chaotic rush-hour traffic."

Odyssey minivan goes hybrid, in Japan

Fiat Chrysler Automobiles' newly unveiled Chrysler Pacifica Hybrid minivan won't be the world's first when it goes on sale late this year. A new Honda Odyssey Hybrid minivan went on sale in Japan in early February, using the same Intelligent Multi-Mode Drive (i-MMD) system as in the Accord Hybrid. The Japan-market Odyssey varies significantly from, and is smaller than the model sold in North America, and there's "no chance" it will be sold here, according to alternative-vehicle webmag, Green Car Reports. But, "if nothing else, a minivan with the two-motor hybrid system would be a good rival" for the Pacifica.

Budd-e will see production

Volkswagen's Budd-E Microbus-related concept will be in showrooms, likely within five years, a VW official has told British magazine, Car. Volkmar Tannenberger, head of electronic development said a car that "looks a lot like this (will) reach production. I can't say exactly when, but by 2020 or thereabouts." The company has made no secret about wanting to put the Budd-e concept's new Modular Electric platform to wide use.

The centre of attention

RAPTORS
GAME 3 PREVIEW

Valanciunas causing Pacers fits through two games

Jonas Valanciunas is celebrating a dunk, his arms flexed, muscles bulging, eyes wild, mouth open in a primal scream. He looks like a Spartan warrior from the movie 300.

The image tells the story of Game 2, of how the 23-year-old Lithuanian carried the Toronto Raptors to a desperately needed victory over the Indiana Pacers.

Two days after early foul trouble "limited" him to 12 points and 19 rebounds, Valanciunas exploded for 23 points and 15 boards Monday, prompting Pacers star Paul George to say, "He's been huge. Literally. He's the one that's causing us problems right now."

Heading into Tuesday's playoff action, Valanciunas was the league leader in rebounds, and his solid performances marked the first time he'd grabbed 15-plus rebounds in back-to-back games in his career.

The Raptors drafted the little-known Valanciunas fifth overall in 2011, but then kept him in Lithuania for another year to mature. It also normally takes big men longer to adapt to the NBA, and in the moments after the biggest game of his career, Dwane Casey — the only NBA head coach Valanciunas has ever played for — grinned like a proud father.

"Everybody wanted that kid to be a superstar when he first got here. He wasn't ready. But again, nobody comes to this league and sets it on fire," Casey said. "He's grown, he's developed, he's worked his butt off. I'm really proud of him. It makes me feel good to see him develop like that, play the game. It makes him feel good to not be worried about Valanciunas, about his own security, about his team's history of post-season defeat, about all the winds that have blown around this team to get to this playoff place.

"He's not a finished product," Casey added. "He's going to get better. Sky's the limit for that young man."

Valanciunas has done extra work with different coaches in past off-seasons. He spent time two summers ago working on his running with coach Jim Radcliffe at the University of Oregon. He's also worked at length with Seattle SuperSonics legend Jack Sikma on his face-up game.

"I just want to win, and I'm doing everything to win the game," Valanciunas said. "I don't judge myself by: I'm playing good, I'm playing bad. The last play is the last play, you've gotta go there and do your job, you've got to give everything."

As the Raptors met at Biosteel Centre on Tuesday, part of the message was to get Valanciunas ready for the next game. The Pacers will look to make adjustments for Thursday's Game 3 in Indianapolis. They'll be gunning to throw Valanciunas off his game.

"That's one thing we talked to JV about understanding: now they're going to come after you and get the ball out of your hands and you've got to make plays for everybody else to get easy buckets," DeMar DeRozan said. "That's what it's all about, every game is completely different, they're going to adjust to whoever's hot, whoever's got it going and that's where we pick and choose our spots to take advantage of it."

LeBron avoiding war of words with Pistons coach

LeBron James has enough to handle with the young and brash Pistons. He isn't about to fight their coach, too.

James refused to fire back at loquacious Detroit coach Stan Van Gundy, who was fined $25,000 by the NBA on Monday for criticizing officials during Cleveland's Game 1 win over the Pistons. Upset with two non-calls in the first quarter, Van Gundy took advantage of a TV interview to present his case to the public that James gets preferential treatment from referees.

"LeBron is LeBron," Van Gundy told ABC. "They're not going to call offensive fouls on him. He gets to do what he wants."

Nowitzki questionable for next game with knee injury

Add star Dirk Nowitzki to the long injury list for Dallas in the playoffs.

Coach Rick Carlisle said Tuesday that Nowitzki bruised his right knee when he fell early in the Mavericks' 85-84 Game 2 win over Oklahoma City in a first-round playoff series that is tied 1-1.

Nowitzki joins a list of players who might miss Game 3 on Thursday, including starting guards Deron Williams (sports hernia) and J.J. Barea (right groin strain) and backup forward David Lee (right heel). THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PG-13 going strong after rated-R injury

When the burning sensation in Paul George's shattered right leg finally subsided in August 2014, the Indiana Pacers young star made a commitment to himself and his fans.

He would return to the basketball court even better.

Twenty months after suffering the unforgettably gruesome injury in Las Vegas, George has written the next chapter in his comeback tale with an incredible start to the NBA playoffs.

In Game 1 against Toronto, George scored 27 of his 33 points in the second half, almost willing the Pacers to a 100-90 victory over the East's No. 2 seed. He added 28 points in Monday's loss, leaving George with two-game totals of 61 points, eight rebounds, seven assists, five steals and a field-goal percentage of 54.1 per cent. He's 6-for-8 on threes and 15-for-17 from the free-throw line, playing the same way he did when he led the Pacers to back-to-back Eastern Conference finals against LeBron James and the Miami Heat.

"There's no stopping PG. He's playing phenomenal," Raptors all-star guard Kyle Lowry said after Toronto's 98-87 victory in Game 2. "You're not going to stop him from getting 25 or 30. He's going to get that, that's how talented he is."

On Thursday, George will have a chance to give the Pacers a 2-1 lead in this best-of-seven series when he makes his first home playoff appearance since May 28, 2014.

"I'm real excited to be back on the stage where I was able to make my name," George said.

GEORGE'S COMEBACK

April 5, 2015
Eight months after snapping his leg, George returned to action sooner than many thought possible.

November 2015
Named Eastern Conference player of the month after averaging 27.2 points, 8.1 rebounds and 4.4 assists.

2015-16 regular season
George ranked among the league's top 10 in scoring (23.1 points) and steals (1.9).

'THANKS FOR THE CHEESE'

McGregor pulled from UFC 200 after retirement tweet

Conor McGregor has delivered a haymaker on social media.

McGregor created a stir Tuesday when he tweeted that retirement was on the horizon. The UFC later tweeted that McGregor had been pulled from UFC 200 on July 9.

The 27-year-old McGregor tweeted, "I have decided to retire young. Thanks for the cheese. Catch ya's later."

But is it truly exit octagon cage left for the Irish star?

UFC president Dana White told ESPN he pulled McGregor from the main event of UFC 200 and a scheduled rematch with Nate Diaz after McGregor decided not to attend pre-fight promotional appearances in Las Vegas.

"Is Conor McGregor retiring? Only he can answer that question," White told ESPN. "I don't know. But he will not be a part of UFC 200."

Diaz playfully replied to the tweet with his own "retirement" announcement. He tweeted, "I guess my work here is done I'm retiring too."

McGregor's coach added fuel to the retirement speculation with his own tweet that said, "Well was fun while it lasted."

Third-straight victory puts Toronto above .500 in Maryland

Marcus Stroman allowed three runs in seven innings, Troy Tulowitzki drove in two runs and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 on Tuesday night.

Jose Bautista had two hits and an RBI for the Blue Jays, who have won three straight to move over .500 (8-7) for the first time since April 5.

Manny Machado and Matt Wieters homered for the Orioles, now 5-1 at home. Baltimore has lost four of five following a 7-0 start.

Stroman (3-0) gave up six hits, struck out three and walked one. The right-hander has won eight straight decisions and 11 of 12 dating to 2014.

Roberto Osuna got four straight outs for his fifth save.

Orioles starter Mike Wright (1-1) gave up three runs over six innings. Half of his six career losses have come against Toronto.

TFC aim to return home above 8 points

It wasn't long after Bill Manning's arrival at Toronto FC last fall that the club's new president publicly proclaimed his expectation for the Reds' opening eight-game road trip: anything less than eight points would be a bust.

At this time last spring after the Reds' first six away games, the team had accrued six points from two wins.

The club reached that tally with relative ease in its sixth game of the season Sunday — a 1-0 win over D.C. United.

While that's now behind the Reds, that doesn't mean coach Greg Vanney is breathing a sigh of relief.

"We, quite frankly, knew we would hit that target and now it's about getting more points behind us if we can and we move through these last two games before we come home," he said this week.

Getting past eight points will be no small task with the last two games of the trip coming against the rival Montreal Impact and the MLS-champion Portland Timbers

All eyes on Nylander in playoffs

William Nylander and the Marlies begin the playoffs against the Sound Tigers. BERNARD WEIL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

AHL

At 19, Marlies centre brings valuable NHL experience

William Nylander wants to keep it simple, but the challenge is complicated.

"We just want to play the way we've been playing ... use what we do in practice and take it into the games," Nylander said Tuesday as the top-seeded Toronto Marlies returned from a two-day break to begin earnest preparation for Saturday's AHL playoff opener against the Sound Tigers, the Islanders' affiliate, in Bridgeport, Conn.

Nylander, arguably the Leafs' most offensively gifted prospect with an eventful year of pro hockey under his belt, understands the need to embrace the grind-it-out approach preached by the coaching staff since training camp. Production, though, will always be the focus for those watching his game.

13

Nylander racked up 13 points in 22 games this season with the Maple Leafs.

Nylander was the first-line centre in Tuesday's practice, between wingers Zach Hyman and Tobias Lindberg. While the line combinations could change by game day, there's no doubt Nylander is their top centreman — which comes with leadership expectations.

At 19, he tends to lead more by example. Veterans Andrew Campbell (the Marlies' captain), T.J. Brennan (the AHL's top defenceman in the regular season) and rugged winger Rich Clune rule the dressing room and keep teammates focused.

It wouldn't be a surprise, though, if Nylander is among the AHL's playoff scoring leaders. He was tops in the AHL in the regular season until a concussion suffered at the world junior championship cost him more than a month. He finished with 45 points in 38 AHL games.

The parent Maple Leafs called him up at the NHL trade deadline and he racked up six goals and seven assists in 22 games — more than the other skilled Marlies who got a shot in the big leagues.

"Just keep on the same path ... it's just a matter of doing it when it's harder in the playoffs," Marlies coach Sheldon Keefe said of Nylander's challenge. "His time in the NHL was good for him, a positive experience. So, keep doing all those things and that's what playoff hockey is all about, being competitive longer. And that's the message for our whole team, too."

RECIPE Chicken and Butternut Squash Risotto

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

While spring continues to play its game of here today gone tomorrow, it's good to have a couple of comfort recipes up your sleeve.

Ready in
Prep time: 10 mins
Cook time: 30 mins

Ingredients
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 onion, finely chopped
- 2 chicken breasts, sliced into bite-size pieces
- 2 cups risotto
- 2 1/2 cups cubed butternut squash
- 6 cups chicken broth
- 4 sage leaves, chopped
- 1 cup of fresh, shaved parmesan cheese

Directions

1. Place oil in a large pot over medium heat and add onion and chicken. Cook until chicken is lightly browned on all sides and onion is translucent.

2. Add the rice to pan and keep stirring as it gently begins to fry. It should turn translucent after about a minute. Add sage leaves, squash and 1 cup of chicken stock and allow it to simmer while you continue stirring. As stock is absorbed, add another cup. Stir. Stir. Stir. Continue adding stock until it has all been absorbed, while constantly stirring.

3. Taste the rice to be certain it is cooked. You can add warm water if you need a bit more liquid.

4. Take the pot off the heat and mix in Parmesan cheese. Cover and allow to sit for 2 minutes. Serve immediately.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
The Sun will be at the top of your chart, acting like a flattering spotlight on you for the next month. Make hay while the Sun shines!

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Grab every chance to travel or expand your world in the next four weeks. If you can't travel, be a tourist in your own city. Study something new!

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
The shift of the Sun ushers in a month ahead where you will focus on inheritances and shared property. It's time for you to clear up loose ends and reduce your debt.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Because the Sun will be opposite your sign for the next four weeks, you will need more rest than usual. Acknowledge and respect your need for sleep.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Do what you can to get better organized in the next four weeks. You want to feel that you're on top of your game and that things are running smoothly.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Slip away on a vacation in the next four weeks, because you want to party and relax. Pack a bag and leave town! Fun and pleasure are the names of the game.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Home, family and your private life will be increasingly important in the next four weeks. An interaction with a parent could be significant.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The pace of your days will accelerate in the next four weeks, with short trips, errands and increased conversations with everyone. How exciting, you've got things to do!
